

SHOOTING STOPS

Thomas Radna, Said to Be a Well-Connected Young Man—Shoots a Bartender Who Mixed in a Quarrel.

ORDERED OUT OF SALOON AND WAS THREATENED.

Admits Shooting McCarthy, but Asserts He Was Compelled to Do So to Save His Own Life.

Thomas Radna, a race-track devotee during the summer months and one of a Harlem gang during winter, was arrested today in Harlem Court for the shooting of Callahan McCarthy, Jr., a bartender, in his father's saloon, at No. 214 Second Avenue. Radna was charged with felonious assault, and because of the non-appearance of McCarthy the hearing was adjourned and Radna was held in $200 bail.

The shooting took place last night, and the parties who figured in it are members of a gang that, according to the business men of the upper east side in Harlem, has been terrorizing that section for many weeks past. The owners of the small shops in that district say that they are almost afraid to keep open at night on account of the numerous bands of toughs who now infest Harlem.

It is said that he is really a relative of Supreme Court Justice Gaynor, of Brooklyn. It is also said that one of his sisters is married to Supreme Court Justice E. B. McCall.

It was in front of the saloon that the shooting occurred. The story is that John Clarke, who is held as a witness, accused Radna of having been in a party that assaulted him some time ago, and through friends he sent word to Radna that he had armed himself with a gun and that when the pair met there would be something doing.

On Wednesday night Clarke met Radna in McCarthy's saloon and there was something doing. Radna went fearlessly up to Clarke and demanded the gun he was carrying. Clarke gave it up. The men then had words, and Clarke said he would yet get even.

Last night the men again came together in McCarthy's saloon, and again there was a quarrel. This time young McCarthy mixed in. He ordered Radna out of the place, and Radna started to go. McCarthy was in fighting mood, so witnesses say, he followed Radna out on the sidewalk with a bottle in his hand.

There, it is said, McCarthy raised the bottle and attempted to strike Radna. There was a shot and McCarthy fell to the ground holding his left side.

Policeman Hugh Cassidy ran across the street. "What's this?" he inquired of McCarthy. "That man shot me," said McCarthy, pointing at Radna.

"Yes, I shot him," said Radna coolly, "but I had to do it. It was his life or mine."

Cassidy placed Radna under arrest and called an ambulance from the Harlem Hospital. At the hospital it was found that the bullet had grazed McCarthy's skin and he was allowed to go home after the wound was dressed.

This is not the first time the police have had the operations of the upper second avenue gang brought to their attention. Callahan McCarthy, Jr., Jack Dillon, George Gleason and Jacob Edwards, all of the same social standing, got into a row at a saloon on Feb. 24, and the reserves had to be called out to quell the incident.

The row was carried from the saloon to the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street "L" station. It ended in the Harlem Court, where two of the men started in to thrash a policeman. They were all fined. It is thought these men belong to the same gang that provoked a riot two years ago at One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street and Third Avenue. Policeman King killed one of the men on this occasion.

Obviously Improper.

"Ghosts of the things they teach in the schools," said Mrs. Cumrox, "are, at the least, very extraordinary."

"Indeed?"
"Yes, after my forbidding my daughter to mention 'Sapho,' she comes home and informs me that the grammar teacher says it is a proper name."

SCARE CAUSED BY BROOKLYN TUNNEL

House Owners in Joralemon Street Alarmed Over Boring and City Officials Begin an Investigation.

Properly owners on Joralemon street, Brooklyn, are having the same experience as the Park Avenue residents had when the Park Avenue tunneling along that street created a panic feeling that the houses were made unsafe by the boring underneath the surface. The Building Inspectors and Borough President Littleton, of Brooklyn, have been called upon to make a thorough investigation of the tunnel and events that have followed.

At No. 31 Joralemon street shorers have put up supporting beams. This house is owned by Wilhelmus Mynderse, the admiralty lawyer. It was found to be sinking. Surrogate Abbott, who lives at No. 36 Joralemon street, fears that the same process will be necessary in order to make his home safe. Cracks and fissures were found running through the walls for a distance of twenty feet.

At No. 36, the house occupied by Frederick J. Phillips, the steps were cracked. There is also a fissure in the front of the house. No. 30, where George F. Dobson and P. L. Thompson live, cracks in the walls have been found. Pierson Wells's home, at No. 38, is intact, but the steps show several cracks. Superintendent of Buildings Collins will direct the shoring of all those buildings where it has been found necessary to secure their safety. Inspector John C. Snackenberg will personally be in charge of the work. The expert engineers have made a thorough examination. The tunneling has been in the hands of the New York Construction Company.
